

Letting Off STEAM in a Culturally Relevant Way

Cynthia Hall

hallcr@cofc.edu

Cynthia Hall is currently the Community Coordinator for the Earth Science Data System Communication team at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. Prior to this position, she served as the Director of the Lowcountry Hall of Science and Math at the College of Charleston, where she provided K-12 educators with access to STEM curricula and materials, professional development opportunities, and more.

Rénard Harris

harrisr@cofc.edu

Rénard Harris is the associate vice president and chief diversity officer, as well as, an Associate Professor of Education at the College of Charleston. In addition to teaching social studies and middle grades courses, he develops culturally relevant interdisciplinary afterschool curricula for students in Title I schools.

Courtney Howard

howardca1@cofc.edu

Courtney Howard is Associate Dean of Education and Director of the Center for Partnerships to Improve Education at the College of Charleston. She has a background in science education and out-of-school-time learning, and supports faculty engagement with afterschool and summer learning programs.

Letting Off STEAM in a Culturally Relevant Way

Tracey Hunter-Doniger

hunterdonigertl@cofc.edu

Tracey Hunter-Doniger is an Assistant Professor of Creativity/Creative Arts in Education at the College of Charleston. She has skillfully combined her higher education and K-8 visual arts teaching experience to create a highly sought after arts-based summer camp on the college campus.